A look at the ways of the Valley Women's Club

by Mary Beth Bowman

The question that came from the audience of about 50 women was music to Tim Doreck's ears: "Where would you say you need the most money right now?"

Doreck, director of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, had just finished his presentation to the Carmel Valley Women's Club during their luncheon meeting at Villa Pompeii when the pertinent query came about. His reply was that, while the center "always needs operational money," he would like to make the pool available this summer to all of our community by completing proposed renovations that will include handicap access.

Doreck's latest project is one of many he mentioned to the group of women gathered for their monthly meeting. He outlined the programs and successes at the Center for 1994 and quickly moved on to describe future projects. "You know where the kitchen area is -- in the right wing -- well, I want to see that become a youth (and eventually community) fitness center," he said.

In fact, Doreck would ultimately like the Center overall to be a one-stop community shop where kids can find full-time recreation and entertainment as well as help with their homework. "My dream is to stand out in front of the bus stop and direct 'em right in there," he exclaimed, gesturing dramatically.

At the same time, Doreck would like to expand the facilities so that groups like the one he was addressing could meet in a central location right near the Village.

The seemingly lofty goals become attainable when Doreck explains the incremental steps he takes to reach the final goal -- but those steps cost money and, he emphasized to the club, "We're on our own out there." So, he must appeal to charitable organizations such as the Carmel Valley Women's Club.

In 1994 alone, the 100-member group raised approximately $2,500 to contribute back into the community. The CV Women's Club has helped groups such as Friends of

It is time for "A Village Affair"

This year's event "Under The Big Top" to be held on 16 January at Los Laureles Lodge at 5:30 pm, promises to be bigger and better than ever. The sixth annual "A Village Affair" will feature nearly 200 auction items which include a vast array of local art, gift certificates for many valuable services, an assortment of gift items and elegant gift baskets, and fabulous getaways. These holidays range from romantic overnights in local inns or "The City" to faraway destinations such as Lake Tahoe, Sedona, Arizona; Orcas Island; and Maui, Hawaii!

Guests will sample heavenly concoctions from 20 valley restaurants and taste fine wines served by local wineries. Four well known local chefs will be auctioned off to serve 8-10 persons in the homes of the lucky winners. Door prizes will include cash and the very special gifts.

Entertainment will feature Pat Duval and Kathleen Tarp with Steve Tosh at the keyboard, and auctioneer Alan Drew will serve up some lively bidding wars. This is a great opportunity for the community to get together to support the worthy cause of village pathway construction and garden projects - and a chance to huddle together against the cold and what a good time will be had by all!

Tickets are on sale at Carmel Valley Business Service, Carmel Valley Market, Los Laureles Lodge, Mail Boxes, Etc. at Mid-Valley First National Bank near the Barnyard and will be available at the door. Space is limited, so get those tickets early!

The Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble breathed life into a stirring libretto written by Taelen Thomas reflecting the history and character of Robert Louis and Fanny Stevenson. Founder and General Director, Peter Meckel commissioned the outstanding production with the assistance of Robert Darling, director and stage designer. The set was a master piece of suggestive design. A sheer curtain used to frame a room became a sail. Robert was assisted by Keren Robertson.

Linden Waddel and David Dunlap portrayed the Stevensons. Their well balanced voices ringing through the rafters. Conductor Randall Behr direction of Stephen Tosh's musical score rivaled any large city chamber orchestra. Under his direction were the outstanding talents of Ken Cramer, Donna Forster, Art Austin, John Orzel, David Dally, Margie Dally and Bridget Conrad. The production's operations crew included Al Struck, Lynette Latchford, Joe Yedlicka, Fernando and Paul Bosczkowski.

Viewing Sunday's performance was Elayne Fitzpatrick. She has written a book commemorating the Stevensons' relationship and their Monterey County experiences. The book is published by the Old Monterey Preservation Society. It is titled "A Quixotic Companionship", A View of Fanny and Robert Louis Stevenson from the Shores of Monterey." Did you know that Robert Louise Stevenson fell ill while hiking in the hills of Carmel Valley. He was rescued and nursed back to health by a bear hunter. A reminder that there was life here before development. Enjoying the show with Elayne were photographer William Giles, producer of the Carmel Valley Children's Art Faire, John des Forge and Sidney Ramsden Scott. Charlotte Roberts Thomas proudly watched with Taelan's college friend, Nick Roberts.

Sharing the intimate luncheon served before the event were Dee Dee Reade, George Schroeder (yes, Peanuts fans, he plays the piano), Kathryn and Jerry Loomis. Jo Brizell and Shirley Walsh applauded along with Moya Meakel, Jon-Peter Meckel and Katie Craft who provided seating serves for the guests. The production was recorded by vidiographer, Marie Wainscot and viewed by Troy Wainscot, Alma and Rod Holmgren.

Robert and Fanny would have appreciated this retelling of their relationship produced and presented with tender loving care, featuring the treasures they gave to readers throughout time.

12-31 Deputy was dispatched to the Carmel Police Department station to contact a man who wanted to report being verbally threatened by his girl friend's ex husband in the Carmel Valley area on December 29. When asked about why he is just now reporting it if it was a threat against his life, the man became belligerent, advised the deputy he did not want to talk to him, and stormed out of the Police Station. This was witnessed by a dispatcher at the CPD. The report was taken anyway.

A Valley Vision built from 29 years

by Virginia Parke

"Carmel Valley Village took shape during W.W. II," recounts Roger Williams. "A group of women gathered in a house at the bottom of Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Road to roll bandages for the Red Cross. Pilots flying torpedo-armed submarine spotter planes would be fogged out of Watsonville Airport. They would land instead at sunny Carmel Valley airstrip. The women would go down and provide coffee and shelter until they were picked up and bussed back to Watsonville. Some of the pilots and Red Cross volunteers married and settled here. They became the nucleus of the Village."

Roger arrived here 29 years ago. He is part of the history and the future of the Valley and the Village. He remembers when tractors were the only cause of traffic problems. He runs a storage business in the Village and owns property. He is a member of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC). He is president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA).

"I first saw Carmel Valley in my 20s. My father was playing the Pebble Beach Golf Course and I was not allowed to caddy for him due to the unions, so I hopped in my 1937 convertible and headed for the sunshine. That experience was etched on my mind. This was a place where I could connect with the land and nature. I came back in 1967."

British Prime Minister Disraeli wrote in 1867, "Change is inevitable. In a progressive country change is constant." Roger has witnessed and participated in the changes that have created the Village. He is participating in the changes that will influence the Village of the future. He recalls how the group now concerned about the quality of the Village was first drawn together in 1977. "The CVVIC was primarily a social group until 1987. We started out with five people and grew to 25. We did not really start taking on the issues until 1987."

"Then we were fortunate to have 5th District Supervisor Kaufman. She lived out here. She went to bat for us at the county level. We wrote and had the Carmel Master Plan and the Carmel Village Mini Plan adopted by the Monterey County Planning Commission. The Master Plan needs revision to meet the challenges of the future."

Roger's view of the Carmel Valley Village in the year 2025 is also going to require changes. "We're a county town right now. We have no governing body, no way to fund or control our own services. The tax monies we pay go to the county and many times do not return to us. We are dumped into the 'county pot.' We have very limited political influence. This needs to change if we are to protect and perpetuate our country way of life."

All Saints Girl's football on a winning streak

by Mary Beth Bowman

They are 6 and 0 so far, but who's counting? The girls football team at All Saints Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley ended its season undefeated and coaches and players are pleased with the progress made in the last three years.

Blair Williams, 14, is the team's wide receiver and quarterback. Williams, now in the eighth grade, remembers when the team was just coming together when she was in the sixth grade.

At first, she recalls, some of the girls just wanted to play football, even if it meant being on the boys's team. The school administrators were not going to go along with that idea, but instead agreed to form a girls team (the Lady Saints) and the idea seemed to catch on around the county.

Other schools with teams include Carmel Mission, Robert Louis Stevenson and Catalina.

"I like the game, for the strategy... not necessarily for the tough part. I don't think of myself as masculine at all," Williams said. The all-around athlete is a forward on the school basketball team and plays volleyball, also. She credits fellow teammates with the success of the girls football team.

"We have a really good running back - Jessica Sims. She runs really fast and is intimidating. She just slips by people and runs into the end zone!" Williams said.

Anthony Riso, a physical education teacher at All Saints the past for years, coaches the boys football, but says there is not so much of a difference between the two genders. "This is not powder puff -- they know how to block and know a lot about the game," he noted. "We treat 'em and coach 'em just like the guys. Both teams get play books and use the same system for learning the game."

Thad Sigournoy, a P.E. instructor for 16 years, coaches the Lady Saints. He too is enthusiastic about the team. "They just took the ball and ran with it -- literally," he said. Coaching girls in a game traditionally involving boys meant taking a "fresh approach." The girls seem more open and receptive, he said, and as a result, he said he "went farther and faster" as a coach for them.

"They had a great season the first two years," Sigournoy said.

Additionally, the club awards one or two scholarships to girls graduating from either Carmel High School or Carmel Valley High School that intend to pursue a higher educational degree.

Ann Marshall, president of the club, mentioned that there is also a Hidden Valley Music Seminars Youth Scholarship.

The very first president of the club was Mrs. C.E. Borchers, elected upon the club's formation in 1949. The club's aims are social and philanthropic in the Carmel Valley area. It is incorporated and nonsectarian, Marshall noted, and it "neither endorses nor recommends any person for political office nor does it take part in political issues."

The CV Women's Club meets the first Wednesday of the month (October through June) for lunch at various locations. There is often a program presented and a short business meeting sometimes follows. In September, a "tea" is given. Normally two fund-raisers are held each year.

The club is "an informal group and welcomes newcomers." You may even know one of the officers: Vice President Lillian French is Program Chairman; Vice President Beverly Flippen is the Tea and Luncheon Chairman; Vice President Sally Fargo is Membership Chairman and the Treasurer is Marguerite Hall. Pam Michels directs Ways and Means and Beth Morrow directs Hospitality. June Levora is Corresponding Secretary and Mary Hargrave is Recording Secretary.

"FORE!" - A pair of Quail Lodge visitors contemplate the "new pond" at the sixth tee. Drainage and water flow from the Quail Lodge property was generally excellent during last Monday's rain storm.

FUN IN THE SUN

Dave Lyon

Sat around last weekend and watched it rain. Just me and the dogs and the leftover Christmas candy. Cable had gone blank and the power was out. The computer was down and my virtual reality check revealed a man who hadn't allowed himself a simple pleasure in a very long time.

So I sat there in my kitchen, chin in my hands, cat on my lap, and watched it come down. I couldn't remember the last time I had enjoyed such a peaceful moment unless it was a similar scene from room twelve at Tularcitos School, umpteen years ago, staring out the window on a rainy

January afternoon. (My grades will confirm this.)

And I thought, "Is it me, or like, did it used to rain a lot more when we were all kids?" And I wandered off lost in 5th grade memories until I realized that the cordless phone wasn't working with the power off and I said, "Well, this sucks," and sat there wondering if my pager was still going to work. So much for simple pleasures.

Anyway... For those of you who called to inquire, the first annual CVCYC/Carmel Valley Little League jointly sponsored Unleashed Golden Retriever Softball Chasing Free Range Time Trials have been postponed due to the wet conditions down at the ball parks. Watch this space for more information on this very important pre-season event. Top qualifiers will be allowed free run of the Little League games this Spring. (Are there dogs in Heaven?)

So, Santa brought you that really cool home personal computer you've always wanted, and one of your New Year's resolutions is: learn to be user friendly with it! But... ya don't know a window from a DOS, do ya, and you're lost on the info-super highway. CVCYC to the rescue.

Starting on Wednesday, the 11th of January, your Community Youth Center is very pleased to be offering a totally new program for everyone in Carmel Valley. A series of adult computer classes designed to be a simple introduction to the home computer! In cooperation with our new and very popular After-school Homework Center, these new classes will be geared towards helping the novice and near novice personal computer owner understand the simple and not-so-simple working of their new p.c.

Classes covering everything from beginning basics through DOS and Windows into multimedia applications will be offered. These classes will be offered weekdays starting at 9 a.m. and will run in two hour sessions. Call the Community Center at 659-3983 for a complete schedule, times, and list of specific offerings. The cost is only $15. per each two-hour class, and all money raised will go towards supporting the Community Homework center, which is offered free of charge to kids of all ages here in Carmel Valley.

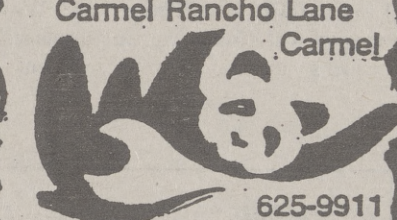

A special thanks goes out to all you Valley families and individuals who have responded so generously to our recent Direct Mailing campaign. Over $3,200 has been raised so far as a result of the overwhelming support shown by the good folk of Carmel Valley! An additional $2,070 has been sent in by people renewing their annual memberships with the Community Youth Center. These folks have now received their really neat, totally cool CVCYC support and membership stickers, suitable for slapping on your car window or other highly visible place.

If you haven't yet received your Direct Mail Support Letter or Membership renewal form, or maybe the dog ate it/left it out in the rain, call the Community Center at (All together now!) 659-3983 and we will be glad to assist you; operators are standing by. Show support for your Community Center!

Roger's view of the future Village centers on its becoming a small country township. "We are evolving from a primarily agricultural region to smaller rural farm and residential land use. There are no more than ten major ranches remaining. The land is being sold. There are some who do not like what is happening. They do not want control. They do not want to pay taxes to support a city governing body. They do not want to know what is happening. This is not going to stop it from happening. I am concerned about change happening that benefits the residents as well as the environment."

"The Village needs to become self-governing. We need public safety services that include animal control, fire, and emergency services. We need to have low key lighting throughout the Village intersections. We need to provide city water, sewage and rubbish pickup. This is only the beginning," he explains.

"The Village township limits could be expanded to Laureles Grade on the west, Cachagua Road on the east, to the Carmel River on the south and to the Laureles Grade summit on the north. This would provide a greater support base for township services. We would need to rezone specific areas now considered residential to commercial and limited residential. The Carmel Valley Road could be widened through the Village to three lanes only. There would be off-street parking facilities with small Village-run shuttle service.

"A Village township center that would attractively house community services could be built on a portion of the air strip land. Perhaps Pilot Road and Via Contenta could be configured to provide a bypass around the Village, eliminating the need to turn Carmel Valley Road into a multiple lane thoroughfare. There are many ways to create a township that maintains and promotes our country life-style and values," he concludes, "It does mean change, which is going to happen anyway, and it does mean working together to come up with the best solutions possible. It means being willing to give some to benefit ourselves and the community."

"I can envision a time when we would be able to have a medical clinic with a modest number of in- and outpatient services. Possibly a local TV station along with our local newspaper. Even providing daycare facilities on a pay-as-you-use basis for working families. I would not like to see us ever lose the caring and concern for the welfare of others that started the Village back in W.W. II. Those women and men gave us a valuable legacy to carry with us into the future."

IT MAY NOT PAY TO DELAY -
PRICES AND INTEREST RATES

Someone once said that the longest distance in the universe is the two inches from the ear to the brain. It can take light years to get through. These days that can be especially true when dealing with some homesellers.

I am very aware that there are some sellers in terribly unfortunate situations. They have lost their jobs and faced with possible foreclosure, must actually come out of pocket thousands of dollars in order to sell their properties. Lenders, too, are taking "short payoffs," meaning they are willing to accept thousands less than is owed, because they realize the property value has declined. No doubt about it, some of these are cruel and unfair stories.

These are not the majority of cases though. The majority of people who want to sell their houses are people who want to move to a nicer home. They know interest rates are good and they know they can get a good deal on a more expensive home. They don't need to sell, so they have everything going for them. They only have one problem; they just can't accept that their house is worth less than it was last year and much less than the year before. And they spend a lot of time with their agents complaining, denying, and being generally frustrated.

Here is a typical conversation I have a kitchen table throughout Monterey: "What is important about moving?" I ask. "We want a bigger home," you reply.

"How is that important, and what will it ultimately do for you?"

"Our children are growing, so we need more space, and the right home will give us a more secure lifestyle."

"Great! I can make this happen."

Then I show the choices and prices of homes available. You get excited. But when I show you the price I recommend for your house, (say it's $118,000) it's not unusual to see your faces turn to stone and your bodies become rigid. "That's $27,000 less than I've got into this house. Impossible! I'll never sell for that!"

Unfortunately, I lose many potential customers right here. But please, stay with me for a moment.

Let's explore your options. It seems clear cut, you can either change plans and stay put, or hold off "until the market gets better."

For the people who can stay put, I agree! You should realize that you've got a good thing and the grass is not always greener over the hill!

For the rest though, let's look at the concept "When the market gets better."

Ask yourself which is more volatile, or subject to rapid change: actual home prices or interest rates? Obviously the conditions that have led us into this housing glut are complicated and there is no quick fix. So let's take a look at interest rates. How long do they stay put? In March of 1987 rates started out at 8 percent and went to 10.5 percent in about 30 days! This is the key factor that has everything to do with buying a new home. At today's rate of 8 percent, for every $1,000 you borrow, your mortgage increases by $7.34. It increases by $9.15.

So you want to buy a $175,000 home. But to sell your house at that low price I recommended, you'd be forced to finance 90 percent of the purchase. Your loan would therefore be $157,500. At 8 percent interest, your payment would be $1,156.

Now, (this is the important part) let's say you wait until "the market gets better" and you get that "extra $28,000" you think you deserve. If you still could find a house you liked for $175,000, you'd be able to finance $28,000 less. That sounds great! But if interest rates were now 10.5 percent, your monthly payment would be $1,185! That's an increase of $29 per month! Some improvement, eh?

And of course, if the market does get better, all properties will go up in value. If homes were to appreciate at 15 percent over the next few years (unlikely as it may be), your new $175,000 home would have $8,550 more equity than your current home.

Now if this makes any sense at all, you have found another option: get excited and get moving!

VALLEY FINANCE

Douglas Pease

John Doe is a 35 year old wage earner who contributed $2,000 a year to an IRA for the past 5 years and hasn't made a penny. In his tax bracket, he did save $700 in combined state and federal income taxes, which means his net cost for the IRA was $1,300 a year. My calculator says $1,300 a year for five years with a $10,000 present value equals a 21.7% annual rate of return ... amazing!

What if John could find a way to make money?

This year John will shop for a $10,000, 30-year Treasury Note offering 8.0% to buy in his IRA. If he finds a way to generate 8% on the $800 annual bond interest, his IRA account value will double three times - and a little more in 30 years, with no other contributions. $100,627. Not bad. Not too risky, either.

If John accepts on faith an average long term performance of 12% for growth mutual funds, and if he invests his $10,000 IRA money in a fund that keeps pace with the historic average, his IRA could double almost five times in thirty years, with no other contributions. $299,599. Better. Almost three times more value than 8% provides. But riskier.

John decides to try it both ways: he buys an 8.0% 30-year Treasury Bond in his IRA and uses the $800 annual interest to buy shares in a growth mutual fund, hoping the fund will average a net 12% above fees and internal costs. If it works, John's IRA will get back the original $10,000 and the mutual fund shares might be worth $193,066, at the end of thirty years. $203,066.15 total. John knows he runs a risk by investing annual bond interest in the mutual fund. But the chance to hold twice as much money in his IRA at 65, as he might if he took the safer, all 8% route, makes the risk worth taking, for him. Besides, he can decide each year what to do with the bond interest.

An IRA ... or a 401k or Tax Sheltered Annuity or a profit sharing plan ... makes "break even" look pretty good. An 8% yield makes it useful. A 12% yield makes it fantastic. Well worth a little planning, wouldn't you say?

Questions and Answers about R.E. closing costs

The day you go to the title or escrow company, sign your name on the dotted line, and hand over a check and prepare to take ownership of your new home.

It's also the day that you and the seller will pay "closing" or settlement costs, an accumulation of separate charges paid to different entities for the professional services associated with the buying and selling of real property.

Q: How much can I expect to pay for title insurance?

A: The point is often misunderstood. Although the title company or escrow office usually serves as a meeting ground for closing the sale, only a small percentage of total closing fees are actually for title insurance protection.

Your title insurance premium may actually amount to less than one percent of the purchase price of your home, and less than ten percent of your total closing costs. The title policy is good for as long as you and your heirs own the property with the payment of only one premium.

Q: Who will pay for title insurance charges, the buyer or the seller?
